NATIONAL PARKS AND WILDLIFE ACT 1974

Goodooga Tin Camp & Cemeteries Aboriginal Place

Pursuant to section 84 of the National Parks and Wildlife Act 1974, I, the Minister for Environment and Heritage, being of the opinion that the place known as Goodooga Tin Camp & Cemeteries is, and was, of special significance to Aboriginal culture, declare the lands described in schedule "A" as an Aboriginal Place.

The values for which the Goodooga Tin Camp & Cemeteries Aboriginal Place has been assessed as being significant to Aboriginal culture include, but are not limited to, the tin hut architecture and the continuity of the cultural practice illustrated by people still living in and making tin huts at the Goodooga Tin Camp. The tin architecture in Goodooga Tin Camp is well documented and is of historic and cultural significance to Aboriginal people.

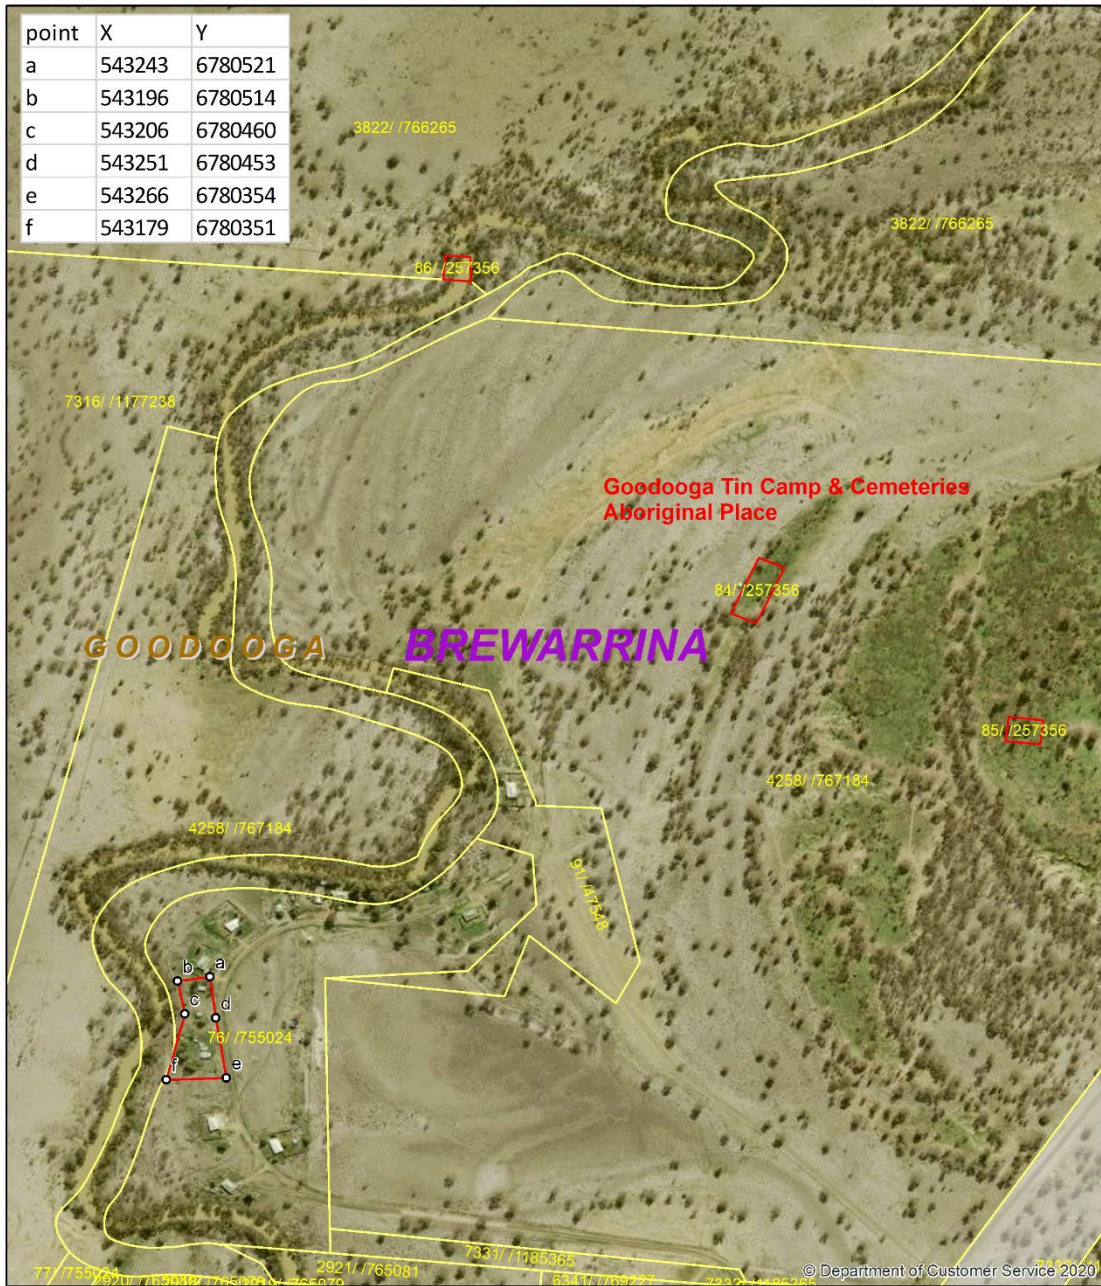

Three Goodooga Aboriginal cemeteries, dating from the mid 1930's, are recognised by the local community as special places that contain ancestors and family members of the Goodooga community, and display use of glass bottles to outline the graves, a feature which is distinctive to the area. Some graves have gidgee or iron posts and rail or wire reflecting the skills Aboriginal people had in fencing. Many graves have items belonging to the person placed on the grave or on the posts reflecting the traditional practice of burying personal items with the deceased.

Minister for Environment and Heritage
